EMMET, THE PATRIOT.

ANNUAL SUPPER OF KNIGHTS OF THE RED BRANCH.

Eloquent Tributes to the Memory of the Hero-The Speech of James Phelan.

The Knights of the Red Branch were resplendent in their new hall last night, the 108th anniversary of the birth of the Irish patriot, Robert Emmet. Their hallon Madison street, which was cramped and inconvenient was abandoned in August last, and their new quarters in the Lee block, one of the handsomest in the city, are all that could be desired. At the left hand, at the head of the stairway, a door opens into a parlor, which has been tastefully furnished by the knights. The banqueting room ex-tends the entire length of the building. Well ventilated, with high ceil-ings, a broad polished floor, it is ad-mirably suited for the entertainments which none know better how to give than the patriotic Knights of the Red Branch. The building was brilliently lighted last evening, and at 8 o'cicck the stairway was blocked by a stream of ladies and gen-tlemen, who were received by a committee upon their entrance into the hall. In the banqueting hall two tables extended on either side, the full length of the spartment, and one across the end near the door. The tables were garnished with fruits and flowers, arranged with exquisite taste, and tempting viands loaded the festal board. Plates were set for nearly, or quite, 400 guests, and there were but few vacant chairs. The occasion was more enjoyable on account of the presence of 100 or more ladies, who graced the occasion with their presence. A number of portraits of the sons of Ireland hanging upon the walls were hung in mourning, among others those of Patrick O'Donnell, the "Avenger," and Parnell. A superb double engraving of Robert Emmet depended from the

and was draped in ribbons of green, white and vellow. Over one door appeared the legend, "In Unity There is Strength," and over another, "Caed Mille Failthe, which translated means "A Thousand Welcomes," a mild form for the gen-erous hospitality with which the knights received their guests. The silver tangue of the orator and wit vied with the melodious notes of songster and songstress, the company hor oring Ireland and her patrons with speech and song. The order of exercises was as fellows: "Welcome" James Reilly.

The feature of the evening was, of "Welcome"..... "Ropert Emmet".... "Exile of Erin"....

The feature of the evening was, of course, the address of that gifted young Memphian, Mr. James Phelan, on "Robert Emmet."

Br. Phelan on Robert Emmet.

Mr. Phelan spoke substantially as LADIES AND GENTLEMEN-To-night we are assembled not merely to do honor to him whose name is on the lips of Irishmen and the children of Irishmen in all quarters of the globe, but also to keep tresh and green the principles for which he gave his noble young life. Under the sun of India, where strange people worship strange gods, among the wild races of Africa, in Australia, in Canada, among the beautiful islands of the tropic seas, before the Golden Gate of California, anywhere and everywhere the exile children of Ireland may be on this eventful day their thoughts turn to the land from which they sprang with admiration and devo ion and passionate love. The Irish no longer live in Ireland alone. The oppression which drove them from their homes has sens her emissaries to the nations of all the world to tell the tale of Irish wrongs and to plead for and win the sympathies of all noble nations. America to-day is called the greater Ire-land beyond the seas, and we who are Irish and Irish-Americans assemble this day to show the world that Emmet died not in It is to us who are Americans first and Irishmen second, a peculiary pleasing thought, that the last hope that thrilled the heart of Emmet ere the final despair had settled upon him was that he might escape to America to begin a new life and win a new fame. Then, as now, America was the retage for the down-trodden and the oppressed of all people. But twenty-seven times had the sun in Heaven made glorious the day on which America had declared that the republican independence was no longer a dream of philosophers or a tradition of ancient history, when the spirit of Emmet, leaving the earth below, lit a new star in the firmament of Irish history, a star which from that day to the present, has been the Bethlehem star of promise shining in the east over the birth-place of Irish independence, and by the grace of God it never before shone so bright, so brilliantly as in this year of our Lord, 1886. The fourth of July and the fourth of March, how wide apart they stand, and yet how each typifies the history of the people who cele-brate them. On the one hand the great heart of a people hap-py proud and prosperous swells with gratitude to Him who has sent the purest and most radiant of all His angels to dwell among them forever, the spirit of Liberty. On the other, like the faithful when the voice of the mezzuin is heard from the minaret that crowns the mosque of the caliphs, a people cease from the active pursuits of daily life to meet together, to take new vows, to draw closer the bonds of union and sympathy that knit together the Irish race to old Ireland berself.

The voice that calls them is that of Emmet himself. Here Mr. Phelan gave a historical review of the attempt of Robert Emmet to capture the castle

at Dublin, and to use this as the incept on of a struggle for the freedom of Ireland. He called attention to the fact that Emmet's attempt was the weakest and the most impracticable of all the uprisings of that era, and explained how it was that men like Grattan, Flood, Curran, O'Connell, Davis, Meagher, Mitchell and others were passed over, and that Emmet had be-various reasons, to be found in the which Gratian and O'Connell re-pudiated, the romantic part of

of Sidney Russell or Mirabeau. In his career, the circumstances

this speech he had in one sentence crystallized the sentiment that makes the struggle for Irish nationality so wonderful, so beautiful and so pathe-tic. He compared Emmet to other national heroes, and wound up by saving that the spirit of Emmet is still abread. The fates in some mysterions recess are preparing the epitaph which will soon be written. The mists and darkness are about his tombstone as in the imagination of the poet who cave us in memorism. But like that the moon is about to beam through the clouds.

"His tablet white in dark appears As slowly steals a silver flame Along the letters of his same. And o'er the number of his years."

The nations of the earth are beginning to harken to the sad tale of Irish wrongs. The troubled air is heavy with rumors. Whispering sounds are borne along the breeze. Strange lights are seen in the heavens. The time will soon be here, and the assembling of to-night is an earnest that the millions of people who boast Irish blood and Irish lineage await no longer hopelessly the time when the epitaph which Robert Emmet desired shall be written.

SOCIETY.

The Overton Reception. The reception given last night at the Peabody Hotal by Mr. and Mrs. John Overton, jr., in honor of their niece, Miss Jennie Ewing of Nashville, was one of the most brilliant social events of the sea on, and the entire word of fashion seemed to have turned out to pay homage to the fair guest of the evening. The threatening and disagreeable weather seemed to have no effect in causing a diminished attendance, for by 10 o'clock the palatial ball room of the Peabody and the spacious corridors leading to it were througed with beau-tiful women and gallant looking men.

The large and beautiful dining-room and the halls were handsomely decorated with flowers, and at the north end a platform was occupied by Arnold's full string band, which, be-fore dancing commenced, discoursed most elequent music, Mrs. John Overton and her guest and niece, Miss Ewing, received in the ladies' par or, and were a sisted by Mrs. Watkins, mother of Mrs. Overton, and by Mesdames W. D. Bethel, R. W Mitchell and R. C. Brinkley. Mrs. Overton wore red velvet and pink satin, Mrs. Bethel, orange silk and black lace; Mrs. M tohell, black velvet; Mrs. Brinkley, black silk, and Mrs. Watkins black silk and Duchesse lace.

Miss Ewing looked lovely in Nile green silk en traine. The following is a list of the ladies present:

THE POUND LAW. The President was authorized to confer with the City Attorney and reconstruct the present pound law of the city so as to empower the President to employ as many special po-licemen as he may deem proper as pound-keepers. The efficers will probably be selected at the next meeting of the Council.

NUMBERING STREETS. The following was read and discussed:

Niles Meriwether, Erq., Engineer, Taxing Sin-I would respectfully submit the following statement of a survey of Lauderdale street, made by me February 22, 1886 Adams to Marshall avenue, 975 feet, nine houses, one correctly numbered.

Union to Brale, 550 feet, from Adams 1525 feet, seven small shantles, none correct.

Beale to Linden, 725 feet, from Adams 2250 feet, four houses, all incorrectly numbered.

Linden to Pontotoc, 300 feet, from

trict Engineer's office.
Pontoics to Vaccs, 300 feet, from Adams 2850 feet, five houses, and Jound to be correctly numbered.

Vance to Georgia, 1925 feet, from Adams 4775 feet, fifty one houses. Of this number, eight were found to be correctly numbered according to the plats in the Taxing District Engineer's office. After running the line on the west side, 325 feet from Vance, the first house, 349, was found to be correct; thence 200 feet, or 525 feet from Vance, the nex' two were correct. On the east side, 225 feet from Vance, was the first one correct; thence 200 feet, or 4.5 feet from Vance, came two more correctly numbered; then came a stretch of 1350 feet, or 1775 feet from

Vance, when two more were found to be correctly numbered. Georgia to Broadway 875 feet, from Adams $650 feet, seven houses, two of which were correctly numbered, the first 125 feet from Georgia, and the second 250 feet from Georgia. Re-F. P. DOW. spectfully, Musrus, March 2, 1886. D. P. Halden, President: DRAR SIR-I submit the foregoing statement of Mr. Dow to show you the difficulties and confusion now existing in the atreet numbers in many of the streets. According to the rule sdopted and the plat-book in our office, the statements given by Mr. Dow are strictly correct. It is a big job, and will take great care and con-siderable time to get the city correctly numbered. Very truly.

NILES MERIWETHER,
Taxing District Engineer. The President was requested to en-orce the law. THE INTEREST ACCOUNT. On motion, the interest account will be given to the bank which will pay the largest per cent, of interest on the deposit, the President casting the deciding vote. The bank getting the deposit to give a good and acceptable bond, as provided by law.

IMPOUNDING STOCK. The matter of impounding stock was referred to the City Attorney to draft a new law, which it is hoped will be more effective.

privilege of reducing this number of MEMPHIS JOCKEY CLUB RACES. Fourteen Horses Entered That Won Eight or More Races the Past Year.

The following horses, that have won eight or more races during the past year, have been entered for the stake races at the Momphia spring meeting;

probably be ten or a dezen entrice for the purse races that have placed light wins to their credit during the past year. The whole number of hornes in the country who have won eight or more times during the scanon is forty-eight. Of this number, as will be seen from the above table, fourteen are entered for the Memphis stake races—a very creditable showing in-died, when it is remembered that four race meetings will be going on at the same time. AMUSEMENTS.

"The Magistrate." A full house greeted that old favor-. Mr. John T. Raymond, last night on his reappearance on the Memphis on his reappearance on the memphis stage. The character of "Mr. Oenas Posket" seems to fit Mr. Raymond even better than "Col. Sellers," and is by long odds a more amusing play. The plot is simple, but full of comical situations. It tells the story of a London magistrate who marries a widow, who dates her age back five years, and consequently has to perform the same service for her son, a youth of nine-teen, thus making him a lad of only fourteen years. The boy is vaturally very precocions and forward for his supposed years. He takes his step-father—the representative of the law out on a little lark, and they wind up at a hotel, where his mother and younger sister have gone to meet two army officers, one of whom is be-trothed to the magistrate asister-in-law, and the other, knowing the right age of the wife, is sought by her in order that she may ask him to keep it a secret from her husband. The hotel is kept open after hours and raided by the police. The magistrate and his step-son escape, after some very funny business, with the whole party in a dark room, but the rest are captured, and the next morning brought to the magistrate's court, and he sentences his wife, his sister-in-law and their two companions to seven days' imprison-ment before he clearly recognizes who the ladies are. They are sub-sequently released through a brother sequently released through a brother magistrate and all are made happy. It is needless to say that he scored a new triumph last night, and kept his audience in a continuous roar of laughter. "The Magistrate" in Mr. Raymond's hands becomes an indescribably funny personage, and promises to become more normal than anything become more popular than anything he has yet done. He is supported by a good company, and the performance should be seen by all who admire a good comedy cleverly acted. Croeby's Dime Museum of legerdemain done by Baiabrega in the canary trick. In one corner of the stace, on a small table, is an ordinary bird cage containing two canaries, hopping and singing as is their wont. The magician covers the cage with a large pocket bandkerchief, and with a small revolver takes aim and fices at the cage from a distance of five or six feet. Removing the handkerchief, he discloses two dead canaries. The only way to resuccitate them, he claims, is to make a hash of them. Accordingly he produces a tin stew pap, lays his birds at the bottom, dusts them with salt and pepper kindles a mysic fire with "my stick" (Balabrega has the patent ap-plied for on the pun) and holds the pan over the flame t'il the birds are restored to life. The further advenas this beginning, and are displayed by this clever manipulator at the Museum. To prevent disappointment, it should be known that Balabrega and Miss Emma Lynden will not appear on Saturday night, but will give their farewell performance to-morrow afternoon from I to 5 o'clock. Ladies and others who wish to avoid the usual Saturday crowds will do well to see this series of performances this afternoon or evening. Sent lars' mati-nees will be held as usual at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. to morrow.

Mapleson in Financial Straits at St. Lonis St. Lonis Cincago, Int., March 4.—A St. Louis special, printed this morning, says: "The Mapleson Opera Company, which began an engagement at the Olympic Theater Monday night, is in terrible straits. Instead of unqualified success, it has jumped into universal smash. The first night Carnen was advertised and not performed, and last night there were not 400 people in the House. Mme. Hauk refusent osing, and the refusal is alleged to be the result of financial difficulties between the singer and the colonel. between the singer and the colonel. Mme. Hank is not in the city. Hall the company is sick and the half won't sing, and the sa disgusted. There is an una and existing between Mme, H. velli, which resulted from S. ling match at Chicago."
